Introduction

One of the most critical and costly decisions which faculty and academic administrators must make is related to the recruitment and selection of new colleagues. Selecting qualified persons with the knowledge, skills and outlook for the identified position, as well as the potential to grow with Jacksonville University is crucial to the university's overall success.

Critical to the success of this process is the Search Committee's commitment to conduct interviews and relate to all candidates, including those not selected, in a manner that promotes good public relations for the department and the university. This set of procedures is designed to support optimal effectiveness in the search process. Additionally, procedures and processes may be adjusted or modified at the discretion of the Provost / Senior Vice-President for University and Academic Affairs (SVPAA).

When a Search is Necessary

When the chair of a division or unit administrator, in consultation with the dean and the SVPAA determine a vacancy in a department exists, the chair shall, with the approval of the dean and SVPAA appoint a search committee.

The Chair of the Department, the Unit Administrator and the Dean will not serve on the search committee.

The first set of activities by the Search Committee should be to determine the criteria for the available position. It is critical to a successful search that all search committee members are present at all meetings, and that the decision to select candidates at each stage of a search involves all members of the search committee once a pool of candidates who meet the advertised criteria has been established.

The job definition process has three stages: analysis of the job, drafting the job description and identification of the job specifications. If this is not a new position, the existing job description should be reviewed to determine if it is current. Changes should be noted for updating. The minimum requirements and the preferred requirements should be outlined at this point. After this review, the committee is to prepare a set of criteria that reflect the expectations held by the department for success in the position. These criteria would include both qualifications expected and characteristics desired. Establishing broad criteria in terms of research and/or teaching areas have been shown to be helpful in attracting a diverse pool. The requirements and criteria are then reviewed by the division chair and dean.

Prior to the start of the search, the rank and salary range of the position shall be recommended to the SVPAA by the appropriate dean. The SVPAA shall inform the division chair or unit administrator and the search committee of the range. The division chair submits a completed HR Action Form (HRAF), through DocuSign, with a current job description, to the Dean, and include the SV PAA, Budget, and Office of People & Culture & Culture Generalist for signatures. A search cannot begin until the HRAF has been approved by the Office of Academic Affairs, Office of Financial Affairs and the Office of People & Culture. The Office of Academic Affairs will send a copy of the fully approved HRAF to the departmental for use when a hire is made.

Advertising the Position

Once the search has been approved the position description will be posted on the HR web portal under “Employment Opportunities” and HigherEdJobs.com. If requested, Academic Affairs will advertise with The Chronicle of Higher Education (on line only). If a department has a specific journal or website in which they would like to advertise and that is directly related to that department (ACM, CCNE, ADEA etc.) it is the responsibility of that department to pay for the advertisement. Faculty members on the committee should use their respective professional networks to seek out strong candidates.

All ads must contain the following language:

Jacksonville University supports the principle of diversity. We encourage applications from individuals with diverse backgrounds and experiences. Jacksonville University is an equal opportunity employer and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, gender, national origin, age, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, veteran status or the presence of a disability.

Candidates will be asked to submit a letter of interest, current curriculum vitae, and contact information from three current references. Candidates and search committees are encouraged to communicate electronically with each other.

Discrimination in Recruitment and Hiring

Jacksonville University is an equal employment opportunity employer. (See Appendix C “Interview Inquiries”) for further information on questions which are permissible to ask and those which are not permissible.

Reviewing and Responding to Applications

The search committee chair is responsible for maintaining application files and organizing their review by committee members. Each applicant should be sent an email acknowledging receipt of their application (See Appendix F “Sample Letters”).

Recruiting at Conferences

If a department sends a faculty member to a conference for recruiting purposes, the Office of Academic Affairs will fund the travel expenses of one faculty member (up to $1,500 for airfare, registration and hotel. If the department wishes to send more faculty members, the department will pick up the costs.

If the department receives funding from AA to attend a recruiting conference, the Office of Academic Affairs will fund the travel expenses to bring one candidate to campus.

If a department representative does not go to a conference, the Office of Academic Affairs will fund the travel expenses to bring up to two candidates to campus.

Choosing Candidates to Interview

Attention will be given to selecting individuals on the “A” list. Scrutiny and discussion of the CVs or resumes and informal feedback about the prospect list may also be solicited from colleagues outside the committee. This list should be forwarded to the Dean for final approval. The search committee is encouraged to contact candidates virtually as a means of narrowing the list of acceptable candidates.

It is imperative that a signed copy of the Faculty Employment Application from each candidate to be interviewed is on file with each department. This signed application contains the required releases for background checks and must be in our hands before any inquiries can be made. Direct the candidates to the HR website for the most up to date application.

If at any point in the search process, the committee finds that a candidate does not hold the appropriate visa, or is not eligible to work in the United States, contact the Office of People and Culture. <https://www.ju.edu/humanresources/forms/>

Candidate's Travel

The interview arrangements for each candidate should be well planned. Arrangements for travel (airport pickup and return, map of campus, hotels, meals, etc.) are JU's responsibility and will be made at the request of the Search Committee by the specific departmental administrative/office associate in consultation with the Office of Academic Affairs. Travel arrangements should be made as far in advance as possible in order to get the best fares and is for economy airfare or unreserved coach rail fare.

Flights

- Contact candidates to make travel arrangements with them.
- Airline tickets can be purchased through Steve at Discount Travel (641-4444 x201) or online via Expedia or any other travel website in order to obtain the best price.
- All airline tickets will be charged to your P-Card. Round trip flights should be under $700.00. Please contact the Office of Academic Affairs to deviate any special instructions.
- Contact the Office of Academic Affairs to obtain the budget number to be charged. (tsloan1@ju.edu or sgornos@ju.edu)
- Contact candidates with flight information and email the itinerary and traveler profile form (See Appendix B "Traveler Profile") to them. Ask the candidate to complete the traveler profile and send it back to JU ASAP. This information is required by TSA in order to book the flights.

Rental Cars

If a candidate lives within 200 miles of campus and flight costs are very high the candidate should be receptive to the use of a rental car which JU will reserve for them. Candidates will be reimbursed for fuel purchased for the rental car upon presentation of original receipts (up to 400 miles round-trip).

Hotels

When making hotel reservations, please be sure to ask for the JU Rate. In all cases the Academic Affairs recruiting budget will cover the cost of the room up to $150/night, excluding taxes, for a maximum of two (2) nights. All other expenses incurred, except for meals or parking if the candidate drives to Jacksonville, will be borne by the department.

The Interview - Overview

There are legal restrictions that must be followed in the interview-questioning phase (See Appendix C "Interviewing").

The list of questions prepared should include a range of information, including:

- vision of the mission of the university / academic department
- view of self in the role proposed
- view of self as an academic

- view of students (attention to experience with diversity is recommended)

Generally, simply stated questions that are open-ended or ask the candidate to describe how they practice the role elements are helpful. Sometimes asking the candidate to give an example or “case history” of how the person handles certain roles and responsibilities will give illuminating answers.

Search Committee members should develop the content of the questions in sessions though they may be “polished” by one or more members for final committee adoption. These questions may then be presented as interview notes for the convenience of the members during the interview.

An interview is a 2-way opportunity: JU is evaluating whether the candidate is the right fit for our campus; the candidate is evaluating whether he/she might want to come to JU to work. The quality of the interview plans and how the candidate is treated are important. During the interview, provide time for the candidate to ask the Search Committee questions. The candidate should feel he or she was treated well by everyone at JU.

Day of Campus Visit

A member of the search committee will bring the candidate from the hotel to campus.

All members of the Search Committee should be present at the selected time to meet the candidate. Ensure that the room for the interview is unlocked and prepared. The Search Committee chair should be present early to welcome and seat the candidate. Committee members should have agreed in advance to the questions to be covered and the questioning process (random, round robin, etc.) which will be used. (See Appendix C “Sample Questions” and “Tips for Interviewing”)

Interviews for a campus visit should include, at a minimum, the following:

- the Departmental Chair
- the Dean of the College
- the entire Faculty of the department
- Office of People & Culture Business Partner (only if the candidate has benefit questions, etc.).

A copy of the candidate’s schedule and CV should be given to all Search Committee members, administrators meeting the candidate and to the candidate prior to the meeting.

Demonstration of Teaching Skills

The campus visit should include an opportunity for the candidate to demonstrate teaching skills. If possible, arrange for the candidate to give a class, seminar or lecture, with students and other faculty present. One or more of the Search Committee members should attend this event to observe the teaching style and competence of the candidate. Following the event, solicit feedback from attendees.

Reaching a Ranked List

At the conclusion of the formal interviews and campus visit, the Search Committee should produce a ranked list of preferred candidates (at least two) to present to the Dean or Provost, when applicable.

To reach this outcome, the Search Committee should thoroughly discuss the findings during the interviews and experiences of the campus visit. Input from all who interviewed the candidate should be sought. Students should be asked their opinions of the teaching performance and other interactions. Sometimes, the conclusions are obvious during the discussions. If not, it is recommended that a secret ballot process be considered to produce the ranking so that each voting member of the Search Committee has a voice in the decision.

Extending an Offer

Following the discussions, the Search Committee should make a formal candidate recommendation to the Dean. The Dean's assistant/coordinator will submit the hiring packet to the Office of Academic Affairs. The packet must include all of the following forms:

- New Faculty and Adjunct Hire Checklist (completed by department)
- Approved HR Action Form to open the position with the middle section completed.
- Letter of Intent Full Time Faculty (signed by Division Chair and Dean). Indicate any additional information (# of year brought in for tenure, moving expenses, computer, any other special equipment)
- Faculty Application (signed by candidate)
- Curriculum Vitae
- Letters of Recommendation
- All original, official transcripts
- Transcript Notice Letter (Do not use if transcripts are in hand)
- Learning Outcome Letter (If adjunct has less than a Master's degree in discipline being taught)
- Faculty Qualifications Form

All the forms can be found on the Office of Academic Affairs web portal:

<http://www.ju.edu/academicaffairs/Pages/Faculty-Information.aspx>

Once the DocuSign hiring packet is approved and signed by the SVPAA, it is forwarded it to the Office of People & Culture to prepare the contract. OPC will then send the contract to the Office of Academic Affairs to be forwarded to the Dean for accuracy and approval. Once the approved contract is received from the Dean, the Office of Academic Affairs will prepare the contract in final and mail and scan it to the candidate. A copy of the fully executed contract will be sent to the Dean's office to be filed.

Some negotiations may ensue after the preferred candidate is extended an offer. To preserve flexibility, no formal announcement of the decision should be made to the campus or to the other candidates until the preferred candidate has returned the signed contract.

Once the signed contract is returned to the Office of Academic Affairs, the other serious candidates should be issued a letter thanking them for their participation in the process. (See Appendix F “Sample Letters”).

Appendix C - Interviewing

Tips for the Interviewer

- Be sure you know what skills, traits, attitudes, etc. you want in the people you hire.
- Define the areas most important to the position. For example – technical skills, motivation, initiative, work habits, people skills, analytical ability, etc.
- Rank the areas in their order of importance top to bottom
- Develop a repertoire of questions to spotlight each area you define as being important.
- Consider “behavioral interviewing.” Ask the candidate how they reacted in a real situation versus a theoretical one. Rather than “how do you react to stressed students?” use “describe for me your most recent interaction with a stressed-out student.”
- Prepare an interview “plan sheet” that lists all the information you want to tell candidates. Also, prepare a checklist of important areas that you want to discuss with them.
- Learn how to listen to what the person is really telling you. Don’t try to formulate your next question while not really listening to the candidate’s answer. If you are speaking 80% of the time, you will not learn all that is required to know about the candidate.
- Do not put words into the candidate’s mouth – let her/him do the talking.
- Take proper notes during or directly following the interview.
- Each member of the Search Committee should have a copy of the plan sheet, ensuring that each knows why they are interviewing the candidate. Meet with members and review their notes as soon after the interview as you can.
- Develop a personal interviewing style or system. By following the same path through each interview, you will be better able to compare candidates using consistent data.
- Commit to yourself and the candidate that you will make a decision within a specified time. However, be sure to allow for enough time in the event that the first choice does not accept the position and the committee decides to move on to the next candidate. That commitment will force everyone involved to prepare for the interview and to make a decision – not waffle. Indecision is a severe detriment to the hiring process.

- Question nearly every achievement on the candidate’s resume. The burden is on the writer to be factual and the reader not to misinterpret.
- Remember to realistically represent Jacksonville University and the faculty position to the candidate – they are making a career decision.
- End the interview on a positive note, expressing thanks to the candidate for their time and interest in JU, and that you appreciated meeting them.

Appendix D – Reference Checking

Reference Checking

Reference checking is one of the most important steps in any hiring process. The objective is to hire the most qualified person for the position. These guidelines are intended to assist the search committee in this process.

References must be completed for both external and internal candidates. The process does not differ for either hiring consideration.

It is imperative that all finalists' references are checked before coming to campus. This step must be completed before the actual interviews, in the event that information is revealed from references that may change the recommendation to interview an applicant. This will also avoid unnecessary expense of travel and time for both the candidate and JU.

The references must be included with the recommendation to hire packet from the Search Committee.

The University's faculty employment application includes the candidate's signed consent to obtain references and to perform background checks.

Note: If a reference insists upon a copy of release, the Search Committee chair shall fax a copy of the signed release to the reference – please do not offer to do this unless asked for by the reference person.

Important Steps in the References/Hiring process

- Review the candidate's resume and application
- Based on the review, prepare a list of the facts given and qualifications you want
- Verify – including the relationship of the reference contact to the candidate and the length of time they worked together, responsibilities and relationships, if applicable.
- Confirm prior job titles and dates; try to confirm salary in the most recent position.
- Confirm the relationship between the person giving the reference and the applicant.
- Don't delay in obtaining the references – again, these must be obtained prior to bringing a candidate to campus. The longer the wait, the greater the risk of losing the candidate to another college.
- Document the scope and depth of the references and note requests even if they produced little or no information. This information helps protect the university against any negligent hiring claims.
- Go back at least two prior employers for each reference check.
- The most reliable and realistic references are typically NOT given by the candidate. It is strongly suggested that when calling the former employer, who is listed, ask for other names of people who have knowledge of the candidate's work, then call them.

Note: you must have, at a minimum, verbal approval by the candidate to check references not on the Candidate's reference list.

- The laws protecting candidates against discrimination also apply when conducting reference checks. DO NOT ask questions concerning age, race, gender, sexual orientation, religion or national origin. These are not job-related questions.
- If the reference has no actual knowledge of the candidate's work performance, ask the reference for name(s) of persons and phone numbers of other persons with knowledge of the candidate's performance, achievements and strengths related to the job.
- It's important to look for gaps in information supplied by applicants before calling for references and/or making a final hiring decision.
- Inform the referenced person that the university has a signed release (on the faculty application) to obtain information from the candidate
- Describe the faculty position, then make sure all questions are all job related.
- Ask open-ended questions, following the same format and basic questions for all references for the sake of equity.
- Use follow-up questions for clarity and thoroughness, depending on information you get from the reference.
- Strive to obtain job-related facts and relevant information based on past behavior and experiences, rather than opinions. If possible, ask for examples of specific incidents.
- Stay alert for any signs of evasiveness or unusual pauses.

Tips for Effective Reference Checking

Q -- How many references should be checked?

- A minimum of three. Conduct as many reference checks as necessary to account for the number of years of experience required to qualify the applicant for the position title. Obtaining information from multiple references will help determine whether the information provided is consistent and positive. It is always advisable to check with employees of the institution where the candidate was employed prior to her/his last position. Note patterns that emerge in terms of the comments made about the finalist.

Q -- If a candidate is known personally, must references be checked?

- Yes. References must be conducted on every person considered for employment regardless of whether he or she is known on a personal basis, regardless of whether a co-worker knows the finalist, and regardless of the level of the faculty position.

Q -- Is written consent required in order to check references?

- Yes. JU's application process covers this issue as the applicant gives written consent on the application. Do not check references on any person that has not completed the application.

Q -- What if the applicant indicates NOT to call his or her present, or a former, employer?

- If a finalist, the applicant must be informed that he or she is a finalist and for further consideration to hire, the person they had marked NOT to contact must be contacted. To prevent the applicant from assuming that he or she will be hired, the applicant must be informed at this time that no final decision has been made.

Q -- If a negative evaluation is received, should the candidate be immediately disqualified?

- No. While it is important to consider any negative comments carefully, the candidate should not be immediately disqualified from further consideration. The best course of action is to ask for specific examples to support the negative comments and then check additional references – more than three if necessary. Formulate a question that asks about the deficiency. For example, if one employer states the employee had a performance issue, ask probing questions in that area of concern.

Q -- If a finalist is a current Jacksonville University faculty member, should his or her references be contacted?

- Yes, absolutely. Simply because an applicant is currently working for JU does not mean that reference checks may be waived. Dates of employment can be obtained through HR, but reference checks must still be conducted with prior departments/employers to verify job duties and performance.

Q -- With whom should reference information be shared?

- Information obtained through reference checks should be held to the highest level of confidentiality. This information should only be accessible to the Search Committee, the Dean, and the SVP of Academic Affairs.

Direct any questions regarding reference checks to the Office of Human Resources.
